Preamble

Marketing Research (MR) has become crucial in today's fast-paced market. With consumers having more options than ever and product life cycles shortening, marketers have less room for error in understanding consumer behavior. A strong marketing research process connects marketers with consumers, providing essential, accurate, and timely information to guide decision-making. Companies that utilize market research effectively can stay competitive and prevent costly mistakes based on unreliable data. Students will be able to relate management problem, research problem and relevant analytical technique. They will also gain expertise in generating consumer insights out of marketing research.
